

December 13, 1938.

Dean R. J. Walters,
College of Liberal Arts,
University of Denver,
Denver, Colorado.

Dear R. J.:

Gee, I was sorry that I missed you and the Mrs. when you were in Stillwater last Friday. I apparently missed you only a few moments. It would have been a great treat to have seen you both. I brought your letter home and read it to Bess and the rest of the family.

I had my son Bobby with me at Stillwater. He is a sophomore, playing on the team. He is a pre-medic and is doing fine academic work and playing a good game of ball.

I got a laugh out of the way you thought we were going to give dear old Oklahoma A. and M. a good trimming. We are not nearly as strong this year as we have been and I imagine that we will get several lickings. It just doesn't seem to our friends that we should get licked. But we will improve and later in the year I think we will make a good showing.

We are leaving Thursday of this week to play the University of Texas at Austin on Friday and Saturday, the 16th and 17th, and the following Monday and Tuesday we play Southern Methodist at Dallas. When we get all these games under our belt and when we play Carleton College here on January 2 I think we will be in pretty good shape to tackle the toughest of the conference members when we play the University of Oklahoma at Norman on January 7th.

Now we have licked a lot of these fellows a good many years and I imagine it is about our turn to take some lickings. Pray for us, won't you?

Yes, indeed, I know John J. O. Moore very well. I met his wife once. They seem to be wonderful people. As I remember, I think they both came into the Methodist Church about a month ago. I think he is a dandy fellow and he has a lot of ability, but I