

Mehl-----And Phog when you agreed to be here tonight we got to thinking: suppose we ask him what he thinks of the Kansas basket ball prospects for this season. He might talk on that one subject alone for an hour. We had to devise some method by which the answers could be limited.

Knack-----So we have a bell here, Phog. When it rings you've got to stop and we'll go on with another question. It reminds me of the time---

(bell)

Mehl-----That will give you an idea, Phog. When Joe said that it reminds him of something the bell rang and he had to stop. We ought to have the bell here all the time for him. Now you take myself. I am never verbose. I---

(bell)

Dr. Allen-----I have the idea fellows. You want a guest up here so you can do most of the talking.

Mehl-----Well, Joe, push the old year over in the corner so we can't hear his moans and we'll get down to some serious thinking.

Knack-----Serious--ah-thinking?

Mehl-----Yes, the other comes later. But first we ought to have a proper introduction for our guest. Can't you make one for him.

Knack-----With pleasure. He is to basket ball what Knute Rockne was to football. And he has just written a new book on basket ball which is so comprehensive that even another coach can understand it.

Mehl-----Maybe so but if Phog starts talking about passing zones and
