Purdue's netmen last night avenged their defeat at the hands of the Illini earlier in the season by beating the Orange and Blue, 23-13, in one of the strangest encounters ever witnessed in the Fieldhouse. With only one minute gone in the second half and the score at 20-11, the Boilermakers put on a 14 minute stall that kept the capacity crowd of 8,500 howling for action.

Illinois was handicapped by the loss of two of their regulars, Boudreau and Dehner, but they played a defensive game that was difficult for Purdue to cope with. Dehner's lead in the Big Ten individual scoring race was well protected by his teammates, as they held Jewell Young, second place contender in the conference point race, to two baskets and three free throws for a total of seven points.

Start Stall

The big stall started right after the second period commenced. With the score at 18-9, Dickinson and Nisbet each sunk a basket. Then Malaska got the ball and he and Anderson proceeded to take life easy. Standing just inside the center line they tossed the ball leisurely back and forth or else just held it. At one point Pat lay down on the floor to rest for a few moments. Ostensibly, the purpose of this time-wasting was to draw out the two tall Illini, Lasater and Hapac, so that the shorter Purdue forwards could get at the basket.

In the first few minutes of the game it looked like Illinois had the edge. Anderson and Young started the scoring with a basket and a free throw, respectively, but Illinois came back with a free toss by Handlon, and a bucket and two charities by Hapac to put Illinois ahead, 5-3.

At mid-period, however, the Boilermakers pulled up and brought the score to eight all, and in the last couple of minutes they dropped in four baskets and two free throws while Illinois was scoring only one charity toss to bring the score to 18-9 at the half.

Young Leads Scoring

Since the playing time was cut down by the "super-stall" to about three-quarters of the regular length game, no one stood out particularly in scoring. Young led both teams with seven points, and Sines and Anderson tied for second with five apiece. Nisbet racked up two baskets for four points to lead the visitors' scoring.

The sportsmanship of the crowd was excellent throughout the game. Several times the crowd applauded heartily when an Illinois player made a good play. Over 200 fans came from Urbana on a special train to see the fracas.

Hetzel Performs

During the intermission Wilfred Hetzel, nationally famous free-throw artist, gave the crowd an exhibition of plain and fancy shooting. Standing on the free throw line, he dropped in shots one-handed while standing on one foot, while facing away from the basket, kneeling, and lying down. His blindfold shots brought a big applause from the crowd.
