Great Lakes, Illinois.

Dear Russ:

Yes, I do remember you very well, but the fact that I have not answered your letter of June 12th doubtless impresses you that I am busier even than I was years ago. You remember I visited you at the Legion headquarters at Indianapolis. I remember you very pleasantly and I assure you that if at any time I can do you a favor you can bet your life I will do it.

I have a daughter who is an artist in Chicago and I have a nephew who is a physician, Hubert Allen, Jr. He teaches at Northwestern and practices in Chicago. Also, I have a brother, Hubert L., Sr.

I know a lot of basketball players who are graduates and who have military problems ahead of them, but I don't know their status at the present time.

Russ, you can count on my treating any communication you give me as confidential. Is it still too late to send you a list of the boys who might be subject to the draft? I can give you a list and you can write them or do whatever you like about it.

With all good wishes, I am

Very sincerely yours,
