

altitude the apparatus is adjusted immediately, and it fits them. So there is a game for everybody. Then I have rules adapted for crippled children or for people whose locomotion is not so good. It is a three-segment proposition in which lines in the circle do not permit the over-crowding on the other area, and yet the teams have all the thrill that competitive teams have shuttling back and forth on the court.

Keedy, you can see the advantage of this game with inexperienced players because the goal is the focus of all the shots and the ball seldom goes out of bounds. I think you can teach all the fundamentals, screens, both offensive and defensive, without wearing the youngster down and without danger of them creating so many skill faults due to the non-necessity of rambling all over the floor in such haste.

I will be seeing you.

Very sincerely yours,

Director of Physical Education and Recreation,
