THE whistle! They're off! The Edmonton Commercial Grads—World's Champions of All Champions in the history of competitive sports—sweep down the floor like a rippling chain of red lightning. And a crowd of thousands of fans bulges the Arena with roar after roar.

These nimble-footed sharpshooters are opposed by one of the most brilliant aggregations in basketball—the Tulsa, Oklahoma, Stenographers, the cream of all sharpshooters south of the international border.

The Grads are fighting hard, with all their skill, speed, and determination. They want this game. It is the third in a best-three-out-of-five series for the international title and the Underwood trophy. The Grads want it out of a sheer love of good, clean sport and out of loyalty to that master mind, their coach, J. Percy Page.
