

1933-37 Record -- Won 4, Lost 15. Sixth in Conference.

SUMMARY OF SQUAD BY POSITIONS

LEFT FORWARD -- Two veterans, Harlan Anderson, first reserve two seasons ago, and Harry Roschlau, major letter winner of last season, may be displaced by a pair of newcomers, Wendell Allan, 6-foot sophomore from Ames, and Bill Nechanicky, outstanding in intramural basketball last season. It is likely that Allan and Anderson will get the first call. Both are good shots but Allan has the edge in all-around floor play.

FLOOR FORWARD (Offensive guard, defensive forward) -- Minor letter winner Bob Kliebenstein, and sophomores Bob Menze, son of the coach, and Warren Maxon, 180-pounders, are the leading prospects. Though Kliebenstein is larger than the sophomores, the latter are fast and are clever ball-handlers. Menze's coolness, basket eye and cleverness will probably give him first call.

CENTER -- A four-way battle between two Ames sophomores, Hilary Ryan and Don Beresford, minor letterwinner Alan Kilborn and sophomore Al Munsell. Kilborn, at 6 foot 6, is the tallest man on the squad. Ryan and Beresford, each 6 foot 1, appear to have the edge at the pivot post.

FLOOR GUARD-- Bob Blahnik, eighth high scorer in the Big Six conference, this year is easily the outstanding man at this position. Other candidates are Maxon and Kliebenstein, also prospects for the "floor" forward position. Blahnik, a rugged 6-footer, is a clever floor man, a good shot and a fighter.

BACK GUARD -- Bill Bliss, 190-pound Ames sophomore, looks like a real prospect. He's big, rugged, fast, a good ball handler and cool under fire. An all-state man in high school. Other prospects for this position are Malvin Levine, and sophomores Al Munsell and Clement Marsden.

SUMMARY: Summing up the prospects it looks as if the five Ames sophomores -- members of the state high school championship quintet of 1936 -- two other sophomores and three veterans will do most of the playing for Iowa State this season. Anderson and Allan at one forward; Menze, Kliebenstein and Maxon at the other; Ryan and Beresford at center; Blahnik, Kliebenstein and Maxon at floor guard; Bliss and one of three others at the back guard.
