

I want to ask your advice, Chuck. I thought I would charge $15.00 for the combined course, or $15.00 for the one. Maybe it might be better to charge $10.00, but I thought that by charging $15.00 for the course if they didn't want to take but the one that would be o.k., too. I do not feel like giving a course for $2.00, even though Thomas does on a large scale. I believe anybody that is interested enough in the course will pay $15.00 and if he won't pay that much perhaps we can get along just as well without him.

That is the reason I did not want to mention price or exact dates at this time. I want the benefit of advice from my friends. I will thank you to speak very frankly and to the point in this regard. I do not want a whopping big class, but I do know that the Treatment of Athletic Injuries will go over in a big way and I will have enough of the kind of people I want to put it over. Again, I do not want too big a class in that, either. I would rather have a sizeable group and teach them real anatomy, physiology and manipulation.

This will be known as "The "Phog" Allen School, Featuring Basketball and the Treatment of Athletic Injuries".

I will thank you for any kindness that you may extend on this announcement. Just suggest that any of those interested in this course write to me as Director of Physical Education and Varsity Basketball Coach at the University of Kansas. I thank you a thousand times.

With every good wish,

Appreciatively yours,
