

October 30, 1937.

Dean R. A. Schwegler,
School of Education.

Dear Dean Schwegler:

It just occurred to me that in the future we could use our majors in the Department of Physical Education for officiating the intramural games.

This is a training that every major in Physical Education should have. Would it not be possible to give these students teacher training credit under the proper supervision?

We now have four CSEP students who do the officiating, and are paid about $15.00 a month, some more, some less. I am looking ahead to the time where CSEP aid will be discontinued. By that time our freshman and sophomore class will be in a position to do this work quite acceptably.

It would be necessary ordinarily to pay these boys, but since we have always been limited in finances, I believe that an arrangement such as I have suggested might work out with benefit both to the students and to the department. May I have your reaction?

Very sincerely yours,

FCA:AH

Director of Physical Education.