

February 14, 1942.

Mr. Maurice L. Breidenthal, President,
Security National Bank,
Kansas City, Kansas.

Dear Maurice:

You wrote a bully letter to Al Wellhausen. If this does not bring any result, you have my authority to go right ahead and put it in the hands of the collection agency. Let's make that fellow pay -- and pay, and pay. This is one lug that hasn't paid.

I saw Al at the Great Lakes - Kansas game in Kansas City. He was in Jimmy Nixon's office at the auditorium, and wanted to get two box seats, but as usual he expected to get them for nothing because he played in the Naismith League.

Off the record, I told Jimmy Nixon that "if he isn't a deadbeat I never saw one". Now, here's the laugh - the boys told me later that he and Nixon were pals and frequented the night clubs together. I hope this gets to him, too.

Sincerely yours,
