

November 8, 1937.

Dr. John A. Billingsley,
Huron Building,
Kansas City, Kansas.

Dear Dr. Billingsley:

Freddie Bosilevac came in this morning with your two Relay tickets and with a message that you desired seven good seats for the Kansas State game and eight for the Missouri game.

I passed this order on to Mr. Earl Falkenstien, our financial secretary. Naturally it would go to Gwinn Henry, my successor, but since Earl handles the tickets I felt it just a needless detail and turned your order over to him with instructions to give you the very best possible. I know he will be happy to do this.

I am terribly sorry about Freddie's nose. I understand that you were down to look it over. From the odor this morning I am sure there must be some submucous irritation or infection. Freddie doesn't look very well. I hope he snaps out of it soon and is in shape to give the rest of the gridiron opponents all of his former fury and power.

That was a magnificent victory - that 13 to 13 tie!

With kindest regards to the Billingsleys, I am

Sincerely yours,

FCA:AH

Director of Physical Education.