Dear Mr. Allen:

We have a boy here at Georgetown, who is an excellent basketball player, that has had quite a bit of trouble with a bad knee. We have had some success with taping, but I am wondering if you could not recommend a brace of some kind that would do the trick better.

This knee doesn't bother the actions of the boy at all and the trouble only comes after a bad twist. The trouble has been diagnosed as a floating cartilage. This is the boys' senior year and he is extremely anxious to finish out his career.

I would certainly appreciate it if you could recommend to me a knee brace that would give the maximum protection against a twist.

Kindest regards.

Sincerely Yours

Bob Evans,
