

for the "cadets". The washouts are almost 50% now. That's at this one base. If it's that tough all along, only about 20% of the original enlistees are getting wings now. That means the Navy doesn't need pilots. Right?

I'm an instructor in basket-ball and outdoor sports. The outdoor sports consist of track, soccer, and touch football - Plus running the obstacle course. My other duties consist of being a Battalion commander in which I drill cadets, make out watch bills, "gig" 'em (put them on report) and be a big brother to all their "jet
