into an inner and outer court and serves as the free-throw line.

Baskets scored from the outer circle count three points, those from the inner two and free throws one.

The device may be used "solo" for basket shooting or teams of as many as 10 players to a side can be stationed in the court.

On the playground Dr. Allen suggests a referee be added equipment. A player could be ejected from the lineup after his fourth personal foul or the penalty box system, as provided in hockey, could be used. In that plan the offending player would be sent to the bench for a minute and his mates be short that period of time.

In each instance the offended player would be allotted free throws.
