Dear Dr. Allen:

I read in the K. U. Graduate Magazine about "goal high," the fine new basketball game you invented.

This seems to me to fill a very real need and I would like very much to learn where the basketball standard can be purchased and, if I may be so bold, I would like to suggest that you make one additional modification on this standard:

To wit: why not make it adjustable for height so that little fellows could use it as a playground or backyard game-- or even indoors in a relatively small room.

From the picture I have in front of me I note that the standard is supported by four diagonal braces which make it rather easy to trip over in the rush of play.

How about setting the standard in a flat, heavy, metal disc?

My guess is that this game will spread rapidly if given even slight encouragement.

Yours truly,

BEN SOLOMON
