

December 6, 1959.

Mr. Ben Hibbs,
The Saturday Evening Post,
Philadelphia, Pa.

Dear Ben:

I have been told that the Saturday Evening Post is planning to get out an article very soon on our new game, Goal-Hi, which we developed this summer, and that the article is written in an uncomplimentary manner to the game.

This game was planned for the playground, and was not intended to replace the game of basketball. The goal is on an adjustable standard so that it may be used by groups of all ages. I am enclosing some of the descriptive material about the game for your information.

The goal for this game is manufactured by the Medart Manufacturing Company of St. Louis. They are also publishing a rule book for Goal-Hi.

I would appreciate it if you would investigate the article that is being written for the Post.

With best wishes, I am

Sincerely yours,

Director of Physical Education and Recreation,
Varsity Basketball Coach.