

October 22, 1937.

Mr. Adrian J. Brennan,
Aetna Casualty and Surety Co.,
Hartford, Conn.

Dear Mr. Brennan:

Your very good letter of the 18th received, and I will reply at once. I am happy to know that you are still interested in the game of basketball, and incidentally in my new book "Better Basketball, Incorporating Technique, Tactics and Tales". It is now on the press of the McGraw-Hill Book Company, 330 West 42nd Street, New York City. We are reading the final proof on the book as the assignments are coming in now.

I am very proud of this book. It is by far the best one that I have ever published, if I do say it. It is more complete and it is up to the minute. I am sending you a description of the contents which I hastily struck off for some one. You can get an idea from this description what it is like.

If you would write to Curtis W. McGraw, vice president of the McGraw-Hill Book Company, he could tell you about when the book will be off the press.

It is a pleasure to read your description of the great game that you played in your upset victory.

I feel pretty certain that you will like the chapter on Tales as this describes six or eight high light contests that were pulled out of the fire by one means or another. I have used 163 photographic illustrations and 83 diagrams. I trust that you will like the book, and after you have read it pretty carefully I would like to have your criticism of it.

I wish you lots and lots of success.

Sincerely yours,

FCA:AH

Director of Physical Education.