Kansas City, Kansas.

My dear good Friends:

And I wouldn't leave Mary Jane out of it for the world.

I want you to know how wonderful it was to be in your most hospitable home on Thanksgiving evening and to enjoy the many good friends that we had an opportunity to visit with. I think the Haynes home is the last word in hospitality and graciousness.

You will pardon me in not writing the usual longhand note which should come from guests who accept such hospitality, but I am afraid if I wait until I sit down to write a longhand note I will be way in arrears, so I am taking the busy man's method of telling you that it was a wonderful evening. Bob was terribly sorry that he could not come, but Jean was overjoyed in being your guest. Isabelle and Mit had the time of their lives. It was awfully considerate of all of you in asking them.

Our football team didn't do much to make the day a most pleasant one, but your hospitality made us forget for the moment the licking that we received.

I am expecting to write the Admiral in a very few days as I am getting out my Jayhawk Rebounds, and we will be sure that he gets one. Also we will send one to the Haynes household.

With all good wishes, I am

Faithfully yours,
