Dear Ira:

I acknowledge receipt of your recent letter and I assure you that I did everything that you asked me to do. I had a long conversation with Dean Havenhill and other men in whom you were interested. But it was impossible to do a thing, which I will describe to you when we see each other face to face when the war is over.

George O. could have helped you years ago, but not in recent years.

I will not say more, only to congratulate you on the fine work you are in and the fine things that you have done for your country. You have great ambition and loyalty, and my kindest personal regards and best wishes are for you. I am sorry that I could do no more, but I am sure that you will understand.

Sincerely yours,
