

lickin to teach these goes just what I mean. I have worked conscientiously on timing my rebounds, also my defensive tactics and I believe I am improving no foolin.

I played a wee bit of football this fall whenever I had time during my off duty hours. I was learning how to handle my 220 lbs to a good advantage. The Army has been building me up with their calisthenics program. I also have been studying up on my "dirty fighting" and have given a few classes on it. The Infantry gets the credit, but without the Cavalry Recon.
Troops they would be paralyzed on their movements.

The Cavalryman has to be an Infantryman, and an Engineer, Signal Corpsman, and Artillery expert to boot.
We are only a small unit, possibly explaining the reason we aren't heard about more frequently.
