

If you should care to get in touch with one or both of these boys, a letter addressed merely to Caldwell, Kansas, will reach them.

Doyle Stiles
Editor and Publisher

Phone 320

Yours,

J. Donald Keown.

(formerly Daily Kansas sports editor)

Dr. Herbert G. Allen
Chairman of Physical Ed
University of Kansas
Lawrence, Kansas.

Dear Doctor:

Perhaps I should mention you at this time when you are in the midst of another basketball season, but, having caught the KU basketball bug while in school here, I thought you might be interested in a senior high school boy who is playing here with the local team.
The boy's name is James Weber. He stands about six feet, three inches, and weighs around 200 pounds, and is fast for his size. He is a defensive and rebounding specialist, and seldom shoots; therefore has received but little publicity this year -- but is in my opinion a very good college prospect with whom you could do great things. He is financially well off and able to attend college, but at present is engaged to a high school girl here, and is contemplating immediate marriage after graduation.

I think if you would get in touch with the boy through correspondence, you might be able to do both him and the school's court squad some good. He stands high scholastically, and with a little encouragement would make an ideal college student and athlete.
There is also another senior six-footer on the team, Russell Goodpasture, who has had the same in working years of the year, and in whom you might be interested.