

Lt. Wm. H. Shannon, SC, USNR
4 Glass Hall,
Soldiers Field Station,
Boston, Mass.

Bill Shannon states that his new duty assignment is on the staff of the Supply School at Harvard University. "Many K.U. boys are back here, so our school is well represented in persons and on record." Professor Shannon was golf coach at K.U. a number of years, and made a most enviable record. He made many friends among the boys. Good luck, Bill. We will welcome you back to the University when this fuss is over.

Ensign A. M. Brown,
U.S. Naval Pre-Flight School,
Del Monte, California.

Murray, I am happy to know that your experiences are mounting in regard to different types of athletic instruction and that you are almost an integrated physical education instructor as a result. Congratulations on your platoon officership!

By the way, can any of you boys tell me of the whereabouts of Lt. John Pfitsch, of Pflugerville Pflashes f(l)ame?

Capt. W. H. Ramey,
Q. 140,
A.P.O. 871, c/o P.M.
New York City, N.Y.

Captain Bill Ramey left a four-months-old baby daughter, a relatively new wife, and a house full of new furniture, and all that goes with a new home. We know, Bill, what durable pleasures you gave up to serve your Uncle Samuel. Sacrifices such as you and other boys are undergoing certainly deserve just rewards, and we are confident that you will have them.

Lt. T. P. Hunter, Jr.,
Co. E, 2nd Bn., 9th Marines,
c/o Fleet Postoffice,
San Francisco, California.

To T.P. "Hambone" Hunter, a trusty Marine and as trusty and consistent a basketball competitor under fire, may we let you know how much we admire you. Especially is this so, knowing where you are serving and what you are doing.

Bob Allen was home for three weeks before he was inducted into the service. I got a letter from him today after he had returned to Philadelphia. He is going to live in the barracks, but we played golf almost every day that he was here and we talked much about you and some of the other boys. You can bet your life he is only one of many who think that T. P. Hunter is tops. Here's boosting for your outstanding battling average against the slit-eyes.

1st Lieut. Clint Kanaga, of the Marines, has returned from Guadalcanal with an attack of malaria. He visited our home and we had a grand time when he told of some of the sorties against those slimy, slit-eyed Japs. He is convalescing in the Olathe Naval Air Base Hospital. He looks fine at times, but the old malaria has got him again. So it may be some time before he sees active service again. He told me one Jap lieutenant who was a graduate of the University of Oregon and spoke English fluently, said, "You will never get Hawaii back. You know we already landed on the California coast." Clint said he didn't argue with him because he knew the Jap would think he was lying to him. Who knows but what some of those monkeys without tails over there believe that some of their ilk have already established a bridgehead in San Francisco now?
