Dear Bobby:

After the smoke of all the basketball battle has cleared away I want to write you again and tell you how genuinely swell you were to the varsity boys and their coach. The boys often talk of you and remember you most graciously.

I think I wrote you and told you that I just handed Ralph Miller the check for $25.00, because I had not had any previous conversation with him before and I did not feel that I wanted to set up a premise of a loan when he had not asked for one. I told him the fact that he was a Phi Psi naturally influenced you somewhat in what you did for him.

Ralph still has quite a ways to go regarding his objectives in a bigger way for the future. The first opportunity that I have to talk with you I want to tell you some things, and then I want you to write him a letter, if you will, setting out the great possibilities for success in a business way for a young man if he thinks of more than his athletics.

This is a thank you note of appreciation, Bob, and again I want you to know how deeply thankful we are for alumni of your sort.

With all good wishes, I am

Fraternally yours,
