

At present I am a clerk in a local independent cigar store. You know a devil in heaven. I don't drink, smoke or swear and yet I must inform a customer which tobacco is good, bad, or indifferent.
which is mild and which is strong. By compromising ethics with realism I have convinced my most exacting employee that he has hired a most efficient clerk. Nevertheless, this is only a stepping stone.
I still am studying
