

They even declared that the very sensations she had from the reverse of touch were vibrations. Some have even denied her existence. (What to those who pass judgment on others, for the right to bring a reckoning: nothing like the world has ever seen.) I agree with this. I disagree with a method:
 "I think therefore I am." Thus I am metaphysically established, and I throw upon the doubters the burden of proving my non-existence. When we consider how little has been found out about the mind, is it not amazing that anyone should presume what one can know or cannot know? Yes there are numerous marvels in this visible world witnessed by her, however, there are a myriad sensations perceived by her by which the critics and thousands of other peoples do not dream.

Helen Keller, in my mind is one of the finest women of faith in the world. I would like to pay tribute to her unprecedented perseverance in the Lord, because he has given every person the privilege to construct her better world, for she is a child of God, an inheritor of a firmament of the mind that created all worlds.
