If they legislate but 10% of the other sports, wouldn't you think that 20% would be a fair endowment?

I have been in this game a long time, Hal, and certainly would not leave ourselves wide open by being utterly selfish, but at the same time I for one do not propose to let a lot of money-grabbers take all of the income and say nothing. These same administrators in the N.C.A.A. talk about pot-hunters and gold-diggers when they speak of athletes who want individual prizes, yet this bunch of mogula want all the cash. Would they not be hyper-pot-hunters?

I believe you will understand what I am driving at. If at the Rose Bowl these football teams get all of the money for their colleges, because they are the ones who draw the gate, then why wouldn't it be perfectly logical that these colleges would get a fair share of the income at a basketball tournament? There is no cut on the football gate, but there is strangulation on the basketball gate. Can you explain that?

I am not arguing with you but I am endeavoring to show you that there is discrimination, and when there is discrimination then a case is thrown out of court as far as its justice is concerned.

Sincorely yours,
