

July 29, 1938.

Mr. Maurice L. Breidenthal, President,
Security National Bank,
Kansas City, Kansas.

Dear Maurice:

Mr. Wellhausen came in this morning and asked me what I thought of signing the note. I told him of course I thought that it should be signed, and further that Al should make some definite contribution toward paying that debt off as his mother borrowed all of this money for Al. I am sure Al is honest and appreciative enough to want to do this.

Dean Stouffer told me yesterday when we were playing golf that he was to meet with a committee from the Board of Regents this morning, so doubtless you are one of that committee -- maybe. I think I will call the Chancellor's office and see if you are one of the number, and if you are I will at least get a chance to say hello to you. The Chancellor is out of town. Dean Stouffer is first lieutenant in the administration.

Mrs. Allen, Jane and Eleanor are in New York, where Jane is in quest of a job in design. I don't know how successful they will be, but they seem to be having a good time visiting shows and seeing the sights that Kansas country people like to see. But as for me, give me Kansas with her wonderful weather. It is better than California.

I am coming by some time soon to at least say hello and try to buy you that spaghetti luncheon.

With kindest regards to you and your good family, I am

Very sincerely yours,

Director of Physical Education,
Varsity Basketball Coach.
