

know they won the Oklahoma City tournament later, with the Oklahoma Aggies in the tournament. I imagine that you have all of the Oklahoma A. & M. scores, showing that they are out in front in the Missouri Valley Conference, but at Oklahoma City in the tournament they lost to Baylor and some other team.

We played Oklahoma A. & M. at Stillwater to dedicate their new field house on December 9 and 10. We lost both games, 25 to 19 and 21 to 15. The Oklahoma Aggies played here on February 8th, and we won that game. I am enclosing a schedule of our games for the season, up to the present time, with the scores.

I might say that Miller has not played over fifteen minutes in any of the games, with the exception of one, so we are still just an ordinary ball club.

I had heard by the grapevine that Henry Iba was planning on taking in your tournament on March 20-22, but this of course is not authentic.

I know A. J. Robertson very well. For years he was the athletic director and coach at Hays Kansas State Teachers College.

You ask about the strength of the Oklahoma Aggies. They expected to have a much better team than results show, but they have a corking good bunch of men; however, they do not seem to mesh as well as Hank had hoped. However, Hank is a great coach and I am sure that they will come along in good shape in any major tournament. But as I told you before, Warrensburg won the tournament down there and A. & M. was entered in the Oklahoma City tournament.

It is my opinion that Frosty Cox has a good ball club at Colorado. Oklahoma drove out there in motor cars during the Christmas vacation, 750 miles from Norman to Boulder, and lost the first game but won the second. Bruce Drake says that Frosty has a well-rounded ball club. Doubtless you know that Texas is leading the Southwest Conference in the six N.C.A.A. districts, and Frosty is leading the pack in the seventh district.

Everett, I trust that this gives you the information that you want. By the way, I might mention that John Glenn, who was manager of the Northwestern basketball team in 1936 and also managed the all-star football play-off in Soldier Field, made the statement that Robertson has a great bunch of "country basketball players", as he called them at Bradley. He saw Bradley beat the tar out of City College at Peoria and he said they have real ball handlers, but I don't know what he meant by country style. If I remember correctly they beat Nat pretty badly. They are old heads and they shouldn't let the big city crowd get them.
