

November 19, 1937.

Mr. George MacLeod,
Marysville, Kansas.

Dear George:

I acknowledge receipt of your letter and check in the amount of $13.44 for six tickets. Doubtless you have seen in the paper where Mr. Falkenstien has ordered tickets printed for the entire stadium at $2.24, so you know what that means. All the seats are sold at least up to the ten yard line, and I think nearly to the goal line.

I am passing on your letter to Mr. Falkenstien, asking him to please give you the very best seats possible under the conditions. There is 15¢ additional due for insured postage for the tickets, but doubtless Mr. Falkenstien will tell you about that.

I am sorry that the band couldn't stop. However, I am just one of those fellows that tries to help you and the other fellow along, and if the band doesn't do it, I would let the athletic association and band people worry about that.

If I can accommodate you at any time, please call on me. I am sorry that you waited so long to ask for tickets for the Missouri game. Not only the early bird got the worm, but the fellow who was just sitting on a limb picked up most of the tickets, since they went on sale in November. Just think, George, it is just six days until that ball game, and you know how many customers are coming yet to get tickets.

Very sincerely yours,

FCA:AH

Director of Physical Education.
