

soon as our art department has properly retouched these photographs. I personally went over these with the artist this morning and feel sure that I have straightened him out.

We are sorry of course that bound books cannot be completed before Thanksgiving, but there is still a great amount of work to be done, consequently I am hoping

The enclosed pages seem all right. Therefore, as you suggest, I shall not bother to return them.

The front matter for the book, together with a group of revised pages and the index are on their way back to New York - special delivery. I mailed them this morning.
