

September 25, 1937.

Mr. W. J. Gartner,
Production Department,
McGraw-Hill Book Co.,
330 West 42nd St.,
New York City.

Dear Mr. Gartner:

I am delighted to know that you are sending tracings of 18 more of the diatrams. I will give them my immediate attention and fire them back to you posthaste.

I am immensely pleased with the progress that is being made in regard to the printing of the book. I am very enthusiastic about it.

By the way, Mr. Gartner, there is one thing distressing me just a little bit. When the galleys come I am wondering if the diagrams and tracings will accompany them. I imagine the thing for me to do, of course, is to send the corrected drawings back to you as soon as possible so that photographic plates can be made of them.

The thing distressing me is that while they are sending the galleys if they do not accompany them with the diagrams and half-tone photographs we will not be able to give our final approval on the galleys. They are insisting that we send the galleys back at once. But I'll not cross the bridge until we get to it.

Mrs. Allen and I are both planning to give our undivided time to the work from McGraw-Hill and Company, regardless of the department from which it comes. We pledge you our undivided attention.

Very sincerely yours,

FCA:AH

Director of Physical Education.