Dear Mac:

I cannot let this opportunity pass without thanking you for the masterful way in which you presented the Mark Cox article. Your fairness in giving everybody credit for everything that was done only set out the more forcibly the omissions that apparently Mark made.

The deft projections of your very versatile pen would cause people to go back and read the Esquire article even if they had never seen it. I am sure that Ralph Cannon, who has charge of sports for Esquire, will interrogate Mr. Cox on Independence Hall, and so forth.

And again, I do want to thank you most sincerely for your generosity and hospitality in entertaining Mrs. Allen and me to dinner at the National Intercollegiate finals. It was an evening thoroughly enjoyed to the fullest extent with my good friends. We appreciate this more than you can know, as we do this fine article.

Sincerely yours,

Director of Physical Education,
Varsity Basketball Coach.
