

their delegates to attend a reorganization meeting called by Mr. St. John for April 4th, 1936. To this meeting all of the various groups were invited with the understanding that if they chose, the representation would be in the same proportion which had existed during 1935. The A.A.U. and Y.M.C.A. groups did not choose to become affiliated with the other groups on that basis. As a result the committee organized with the understanding that it would represent the National Collegiate Athletic Association with eight representatives in addition to Chairman St. John and Editor Oswald Tower, the National Federation with four representatives, the Canadian Amateur Basketball Association with one representative and the Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union with one representative.

The chairman then called for suggestions relative to the name of the reorganized committee. It was moved by Barber, seconded by Swaffield and unanimously carried that the name "National Basketball Committee of the United States and Canada" be adopted and that the notation be carried that this committee represents the four organizations mentioned above.

The committee then proceeded to a discussion of the adoption of a constitution to serve as a guide for the various activities of the committee. It was moved by Tower, seconded by St. Clair and unanimously carried that a small constitutional committee be appointed to remodel the previously adopted constitution and to bring it up to date and that the constitution as redrafted by the committee be submitted to the secretary for distribution to all members of the committee, this redrafted form to be considered in effect until such time as the committee meets again to formally vote upon its ratification.

The committee then proceeded to a discussion of matters pertaining to the printing and distribution of the guide. It was made clear by the chairman that under the new articles of agreement relative to reorganization that the National Federation or any other constituent group would have the right to print and distribute the rules as made by the joint committee in any manner which might best fit the type of organization of that particular group. It was further made clear that if this right were exercised by any one of the groups that that group would then take care of the expenses of its own representatives to the National Rules meeting. It was moved by Rowe, seconded by Barber and unanimously carried that this type of organization be approved.

There was a short discussion of matters pertaining to the proper time of distribution and the sentiment was expressed that distribution should be made as early as possible without interfering too greatly with a widespread sale of the guide. It was further understood that the time of distribution of the separates to be published by any one of the constituent organizations would be determined by the machinery of distribution in that organization. It was recommended that the time of distribution should not be later than the first part of October.
