After more than thirty years connection with athletics Dr. Walter E. Meanwell will devote his time to the practice of medicine. Dr. Meanwell first developed the short pass game and with its use his teams won many championships at Wisconsin and Missouri. He has served many years on the National Rules Committee and was chairman of the American Olympic Basketball Committee. He is the author of several books on training and playing technique, and has been influential in national basketball circles for many years. Coaches everywhere hope that his new duties will not entirely divorce him from the game to which he has given the greater part of his life.

J. Craig Ruby, a former Meanwell forward at Missouri, and for twelve years coach at the University of Illinois, also has retired and is in the insurance business in Kansas City, Mo. His place at Illinois is being taken by Douglas R. Mills. Mr. Ruby was a charter member of the Coaches Association, served one term as its president, has been chairman of several of its most important committees, and has contributed much in research to the game.
