

VIII

Give a model of a talk to your boys in the dressing room just before a game with your traditional opponents. You are the coach. Use the first person form of address and omit nothing that will enable your team to have the advantage of strategy, fundamentals, and inspiration.

IX

Outline the coach's responsibilities to the team on a three-game trip. Cover (a) the time that the team is traveling, (b) pre-game time, (c) game time, (d) after-game periods and recreational as well as serious-business periods. Should team members be allowed to visit friends and relatives on trips? Why or why not?

X

Give in detail your idea of what benefit the coach should derive in the way of compensation from his association with young men. State your ideas of what the coach's moral and intellectual equipment should be before he should assume the responsibilities of such a position. What should his attitude be toward the community, the faculty, the students, and the team?