Dear Dr. Powell:

I stopped by your office and got my glasses while you were out of town. Your assistant fixed them up in tip-top style, and I am pleased beyond measure.

After a fellow lives for six months in a house with broken glasses for the admittance of light he can really appreciate it when he has ground glasses that not only selectively admit light, but project the vision most properly.

I expect to drop by and have you adjust them in the very near future. Until then, I am

Very sincerely yours,
