Last week at Minneapolis, Minn., at the Central Physical Education Association meeting the academic educators pointed out the game of Basket ball as a unique medium of education. Both physical educators as well as academic educators repeatedly used basket ball in their graphic illustrations to demonstrate the educable child.

No other game in America has this important preeminence at the present time. Therefore it behooves our University, College, and High School coaches to look well to the rules of our favorite game so that no great physical injury will come to the participants through too strenuous indulgence and abuses. And further, so that we may preserve this game as the paramount educator's medium of our nation, let us keep it an educational sport, amateur in spirit. Basket ball is still a sport not a business. Dr. ^{James} Naismith gave the ~~the~~ sport world a great gift and without monetary consideration. The least that we can do is to carry on. James A. Naismith
