In Georgia
 New England Industrialists moved their machinery down in Georgia of cheaper labor
 first, it is obvious people wanted - more prosperity than they had even experienced - even and spent their money.
 They did not return to work with they had spent every dime they possessed
 The factory owners did not know what to do about it.

 They were discouraged and were ready to cease their machinery and move back to modest and thriving New England.
 a stockholder had a son who had graduated from either Harvard or Yale was sent down to take some kind of a job in the factory.
 He didn't study much but he got <sup>the</sup> <sup>some</sup> the Co. store had not been doing as well as it should, so the son was appointed manager of the Co. store.
 The building was a long
