Physical Education Classes Not a Haven for Paid Athletes

Chicago, Ill., March 29 (AP)— Dr. Delbert Oberteuffer of Ohio State spoke out Wednesday against an opinion he said was held in some academic quarters that a college physical education department is "a haven for recruited athletes."

Dr. Oberteuffer, a professor of physical education, made a survey of such departments at behest of the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

Reporting at the association's meeting, he said:

Analysis must disabuse the academicians or anyone else of any opinion that the professional curriculum in physical education departments is lacking in respectability and as such is a haven of refuge for recruited athletes."

On the contrary, he said, staffs of college physical education departments "have a fine educational viewpoint . . . and try to do the job well under the apparent overshadowing cloud of the more spectacular athletic programs."

Dr. Oberteuffer said he talked with physical educationists, deans, presidents, biologists and other scientists of 10 institutions in the midwest, names of which he did not make public.
