Culture Need of Faculty, Boucher Says

Lincoln, March 29 (AP)—Culture is the first essential today for a college faculty member, in contrast to yesteryear's demand for a prolific producers of research publication, is the opinion of Chancellor C. S. Boucher of the University of Nebraska.

"The faculty member who is most desired, because his is of greatest value in achieving the ideals of a college or university," Dr. Boucher said in an article in the current publication of the Association of American Colleges, "is a man or woman who is a capable producing scholar, an inspiring and effective teacher, and with a cultural force in the life and work of the institution."
