

A Jewish boy living in a small town had graduated from prep school with the highest honors. His father naturally was very much thrilled over this, and said to the boy, "My son, as a reward for your wonderful record I am going to let you pick any college in the country. You can attend any college that you desire."

The boy asked for a few days ~~during~~ which to think the matter over. About a week later the boy met with his father and said, "Well, Dad, I have picked the college that I want to attend go to."

"Fine", said the father, "I don't care anything about the expenses. I have but one son and he has made me <sup>very</sup> happy, and I want to make him happy. What college have you chosen?"

"Dad", said the boy, "I have decided to go to Notre Dame."

The father looked at him in amazement. "Notre Dame!", he said, with disappointment showing upon his face. "Notre Dame!", he exclaimed. "Why, Sam, with all these wonderful colleges throughout the country -- Cornell, Yale, Harvard, ~~Kansas Univer-~~ ~~sity~~, Princeton, Northwestern, - why did you have to pick a Catholic school? What will our neighbors think? What will the Rabbi say?"

The boy answered stubbornly, "You told me that I could pick any school that I wanted. It's Notre Dame that I ~~want~~ desire ~~to go to.~~ above all others."

Reluctantly the father kept his bargain, and sent him to Notre Dame. But he cautioned him not to forget the teachings of his own people. Six months later at the approach of the Holy Jewish Holidays, Yom Kippur, which is the holiest holiday in the Jewish religion, the father sent a wire to his son at Notre Dame as follows:

"My dear son, do not forget Yom Kippur starts tomorrow."

He received an <sup>immediate</sup> ~~answering~~ wire as follows:

"I am glad Yom Kippur starts tomorrow. Put ten dollars on his nose. I will say three Hail Mary's and hope to hell he comes in first."

The athlete who was failing in his studies was met in the corridor by the professor of History. The professor was a great basketball fan and was quite anxious to have the boy pass his examinations, so he said to the boy, "I wish you would do something about your studies. Why don't you sit down and work on your History?"

The boy in a very gruff voice answered, "Gee, I ain't got no time for nuttin but me English."

Leisure Time

You are interested in this because it confronts you with possibilities of your spare time.
Did you ever stop to think that most of the worlds greatest men have achieved their true life work not in the course of their needful occupations, but in their spare time?

A tired out rail splitter crouched over his tattered books by candle light or by glow fire, at the days end; preparing for his future, instead of snoring or sky larking like his co laborers - Lincoln cut out his path to later immortality - in his spare time.

An underpaid and overworked telegraph operator stole hours from sleep or from play, at night, trying to crystallize into realities certain fantastic dreams in which he had faith. Today the whole world is benefiting by what Edison did - in his spare time -

a home at Leed instructor in a - obscure college varied the drudgery he hated by spending his evenings and holidays in tinkering with a queer device of his, at which his fellow teachers laughed. But he invented the telephone - in his spare time.

~~Says you too~~ Any creative work is play. Jesus said to a group of men -
"follow me and I will make you fishers of men." Their chief work was fishing.

Says you too, have spare time. The boy who says, "I would do such and such a great thing, if only I had time!" would do nothing if he had all of the time see the calendar. There is always time - spare time - at the disposal of every human being who has the energy to use it. Use it!

I looked on life and found it to consist,
Mostly of things we might have had but missed.
I looked on death, and saw that it was made,
Of laws we never knew, but disobeyed.
I looked on youth, and found it half awake
Wishing for things it lacked the will to make.
I looked on age, and saw its cheeks were wet
With tears of pain, impotence and regret.
I looked on wealth greater than human need,
And watched it crush the owner and its seed.
I looked on poverty, and found it based
On ignorance and indolence and waste.
I looked on fame, and found that it was crowned
With poppies which were blown from bloody ground.
I looked on war and saw its sturgid tide
Of ancient cruelties and racial pride.
I looked on love, but could not separate
The tangled threads of lust, self love and hate.

AS TO GAMENESS.

It isn't the flame and the rush and the dash,
It isn't the charge and the sweep and the crash,
It isn't the sudden emotional thrill of the heart that's ablaze with victorious will;

But it's just coming on---coming on----coming on,
In the face of all hell when the last hope seems gone;
Still plugging and plodding---whatever the load,
Coming on---coming on---to the end of the road.

There's only one reason for games strewn about,
Not winning or losing but playing them out;
Not merely to pick up the cheers that are due,
~~Forgotten~~
Forgotten tomorrow when others break through;
Still plugging and pludding and groping away,
Through fogs and through shadows that hold one at bay,
Well knowing how little it matters if one Keeps pounding along ~~xxx~~ to the end of the run.

" Mens Sana In Corpore Sano
(A sound mind in a sound body)

" No citizen has the right to be an amateur in the matter of Physical Training. It is a part of his profession as a citizen to keep himself in good condition, ready to serve his state at a moment's notice.

The instinct of self preservation demands it likewise, for how helpless is the state with the ill-trained youth in war or in time of danger.

Finally, what a disgrace it is for a man to grow old without ever seeing the beauty and strength of which his body is capable.

Socrates

Dr. Allen —

I suggest that the bulletin board be placed at the foot of the stairs. Every student entering the dressing room must go by that spot and the light is good. Above is one quotation we might use on the board.

Henry

"If by gaining knowledge we destroy our health, we labor for a thing that will be useless in our hands.

"He that sinks his vessel by overloading it though it be with gold and silver and precious stones, will give its owner but an ill account of his voyage."

Opportunity

MASTER of human destinies am I.
Fame, love, and fortune on my footsteps wait,
Cities and fields I walk; I penetrate Deserts and seas remote, and, passing by Hovel, and mart, and palace, soon or late
I knock unbidden, once at every gate!
If sleeping, wake--if feasting, rise before
I turn away. It is the hour of fate,
And they who follow me reach every state
Mortals desire, and conquer every foe
Save death; but those who doubt or hesitate,
Condemned to failure, penury and woe,
Seek me in vain and uselessly implore--
I answer not, and I return no more.

Physical Fitness in a Democracy

A Nation that lacketh vision perisheth! Someone has also said, "God makes us wise to know, how strong the stalk must grow, that rears so fair a flower". While civilization, it seems, is moving steadily downward on the broad way of physical and moral self-destruction, this is the exact time, it seems to me, to launch a physical fitness campaign, to raise the physical powers of our nation, tenfold.

Physical powers which are chiefly muscular strength and endurance are the ultimate means of producing, transporting and distributing food, preparing shelter and manufacturing clothing. Learning, depends on physical, at least quite as much as on mental fitness. This is true for both children and adults, whether the learning be knowledge or skills--a pedagogical axiom, teachers are already re-discovering. The physically fit man or woman has at least capacity to serve others. And the greater the fitness the greater may be the service. Nor can men and women enjoy their leisure when physical powers are absent or even merely depleted.

As the giant oak drives its root like tentacles into the earth and clutches a giant boulder to make its attachments more secure so does the human body attach its ligaments and tendons to bones for muscular strength and physical security.

Seven eights of the return circulation of the blood back to the heart is dependent upon muscular exercise. Finally, the physical powers of human bodies are the ultimate recourse for self-preservation. A strong man or nation may succumb but a weak one cannot long survive in a world of ruthless force. Indeed the relations between physical powers, courage, and will are so intimate that psychologists, educators and dictators alike join them, in the almost instinctive phrase, strength and character--modern engineers and industrialists exhaust every means to measure and improve the strength and endurance of material. Why not then at this critical hour consider the conservation of physical fitness. It should be the prime concern of any rational thinking individual. The pioneer psychologists of early days dwelt upon this thought. G. Stanley Hall said, "man is an omnibus in which all of his ancestors ride". Schiller and Spencer promoted the idea of the surplus energy theory of play. The child played because it had an abundance of surplus energy.

The biological theory of play finds its followers supporting the premise that the lower animal develops muscles in play which enable it at later times to catch its prey. The cat toys with a leaf or its own tail to develop its muscular responses so it can catch a mouse at a needful time.

Running, jumping, leaping, vaulting and climbing are the fundamental activities of man. The big muscle activities produce strength and vitality. The smaller muscles activities, coordination and skills. But upon the strength of the big muscles activity is dependent the finer responses of the smaller muscle groups.

So, as the boy learns to play the quickly bounding ball instead of permitting the ball to play him, he is learning quick and correct reactions to difficult situations. The uncanny forward passers in football or the adept basketball passer has developed an unusual peripheral or depth vision which enables him to locate his team mate and to pass the ball successfully at a rapidly moving target at the exact moment.

The biological theory of play is brought into practical use in this case. This athlete by developing such unusual depth perceptions is enabled to judge the speed of an oncoming automobile and to determine the speed of his own car, when passing a truck, so as to avoid any semblance of danger.

Or, when going through busy intersections the peripheral vision of the driver, often tested in games, is sufficiently strong to avoid collisions. A successful response to an unusual situation is the reward of the winner in athletic contests.

Old England's famous quotation, "That the battle of Waterloo was won on the Cricket Fields of Eaton and Rugby", is still good today. Doubtless the battle of the Bismark will call forth quotations equally famous.

At the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, New York, above the Gymnasium door carved in stone are these words of Major Koehler, "Upon the fields of friendly strife are sown the seeds that on other fields on other days, are borne the fruits of Victory."

All over America in our Universities, colleges, and highschools, we have a great army of American youth who are playing games and as they play, they develop quick reaction and responses which will make them more fit for OUR GREAT DEMOCRACY in time of NEED. A varsity letter on the breast of our American Collegiate means that he has played for fun, and that he has excelled in the laboratory of joyous endeavors. The Nazi plays at war as the American plays for fun.

A broadsword scar on the face of a Nazi is exhibited with pride as is a Varsity letter on the breast of our American athlete.

Our American boys when playing games are playing for sheer fun, but at the same time, they are breathing with their legs. And, as they breathe with these large fundamental muscles they build a stronger body.

Glenn Cunningham, the greatest of all the World's Champion Milers, began as a handicapped boy. The Ideal before him, when he was a little fellow, was clean competition, allowing every boy a just start and a fair finish. We're happy to think that this is our way of life and although handicapped, no impediments are placed in the way of youth. On the other hand, encouragement is given them so that they may grow stronger. As play and games are open to all of our American Youth so is the right of free enterprise open to all of our American Citizens. Play and games plus work develop moral, esprit de corps.

Every worthy organization is built upon such an ideal, and the perpetuity of that organization is largely determined by the sincerity with which the ideal is fostered.

Through unnumbered years the oncoming crop of youthful athletes will attempt to right some wrong, to fight for their schools, and to excel some old star's record---in all, a triple prayer of conquest to dream true. For this is the never-changing and immortal spirit of youth.

Last Tuesday evening at 8:30 P.M. the President of our own United States spoke to the Youth of America as well as to its oldsters. His words bristled with imminent danger to our Country.

NOW is the time for all good men to come to the aid of their Country by becoming superbly physically fit.
