

A Jewish boy living in a small town had graduated from prep school with the highest honors. His father naturally was very much thrilled over this, and said to the boy, "My son, as a reward for your wonderful record I am going to let you pick any college in the country. You can attend any college that you desire."

The boy asked for a few days ~~during~~ which to think the matter over. About a week later the boy met with his father and said, "Well, Dad, I have picked the college that I want to attend go to."