

Fig. 3

HORIZONTAL FLOAT WITH KNEES BENT AND FEET DRAWN

By drawing up the feet the body balance is stabilized thus preventing the legs and feet from sinking too low and pulling the swimmer under the water. The knees are bent up slowly when the swimmer feels the legs upsetting the balance of the float.