

A four year requirement would be the ideal arrangement for developing physical fitness but the facilities are inadequate for handling such a large group.

Women are being organized into the army corps and need to be physically fit as well as the men.

Mothers of tomorrow must be physically fit, or what type of population are we to have. The physically fit man is becoming more aware of the weaknesses of the physical unfit woman. He is being trained in athletic activities for use in his recreation. To keep abreast of him and to hold his interest the woman must do the same.

There are only three of the larger universities in the United States which do not require Physical Education for women. Why is Kansas not willing to comply with the desires of the government in attempting to make women more physically fit?

Are we still to be ashamed of facing other institutions who are complying with the governments wishes. The medical school was late in changing its curriculum to meet the speeded up process of other schools. They did make the change for they didn't wish to have a black mark against them. Why shouldn't Physical Education do the same?

With required Physical Education the major department would have an increased enrollment.
