Speaking of Howard, you know there are many things when I think and I wonder if we wouldn't rather have him go to school in the middle west. Sometimes I get very impatient with the tradition of ivy clad education here in the east.
Besides being expensive most of the schools are so very formal in curriculum. Only a liberal arts college in many of them, and it seems to me nobody has any ideal of success that don't embody making money. Well, well - here I go crumpling and that means it's time for me to stop. At any rate if Mrs. Kuffteen could take a minute and wouldn't mind doing one more favor for me she might ring up the registrar's office and ask them to send the MacCurdy's a catalogue.

Well I must get along to bed. It's an in position to write more than a paragraph to you when you are as busy as I know you must be - I did appreciate your letter tho - and I wanted you to know how I felt about the Catherine matter - My best always to all of you
