

November 26, 1940

Dearest Daughter Jane:

I am sending you a carbon copy of a letter that I have written Austin Faulkner, whose father is an executive in one of the packing plants in Chicago. He represents some packing plant in the State of Iowa. You will remember that Austin Faulkner was the young man that Mr. Taylor, of the Standard Oil Company, told me about and insisted that Austin come to the hotel for a visit. He did this and we had a very nice afternoon. Austin is attending the Country Day School, I believe, in Chicago; at least it is some private school.

The Faulkner's formerly lived in Kansas City, Kansas and it was there that Taylor made their acquaintance. He hopes to come back and attend K.U. Incidentally, he is an athlete--a football and basketball player--and a swell looking young man. I would be glad if you had time enough to say hello to him in one of your freer moments.

We certainly enjoyed having you home. I am going to write you a letter in longhand in the very near future but I have been so rushed that I have not had the opportunity as yet.

The Varsity is playing the All-Stars tonight at 7:45. Prior to that at 6:00 Mother and I are going over to the Phi Delt House where I speak soon after 6:00, and then I go down to a Chili Feed at the High School where I speak for about 20 minutes at 7:00, and then we have our game at 7:45, so you see my speaking schedule is pretty heavy. Last night Mother and I attended the Pi Phi House, where I talked to the girls in their recreation room. These speaking engagements are in connection with the Student Christian Movement. They close their meetings tonight prior to the game.

Paul Moritz, you will remember him as a Summerfield scholar and a YMCA President, has been in China for the Student Christian Federation. He spoke at convocation on Monday regarding "Education in a Chinese Dugout".

I trust that you are well and happy.

Affectionately,