

Mrs. Livingston: If the experience of the past forty years is worth anything, if the lessons of this war crisis have been brought home and we are to profit by them, then a system of public recreation is the most worthwhile investment that the people of Lawrence can make. Dividends in youth are paid daily; invest early.

Announcer: Thank you. We are glad to get the comments of one with such a wide experience as yours. But, Mrs. Livingston, you haven't told us just exactly what you are doing in Lawrence. You have told us all about the trends of the National Recreation Association, but a charming person such as yourself must be contributing quite actively here in our city, and our listeners would like to know more about your training course for volunteer recreation leaders.

Mrs. Livingston: Each evening this week, and all day Saturday, in Robinson Gymnasium on your lovely campus, I am meeting with the leaders from the churches, the Parent-Teacher Association, the schools, the girl scouts, the Y.M.C.A. and the Y.W.C.A., members of your Lawrence Recreation Council, interested housewives, recreation leaders from your Sunflower Village, Haskell Institute, and representatives of your civic clubs - and we are going through the various activities that comprise a recreational program - games for all ages, recreational music, stunt songs, creative dramatics, musical mixers - a whole gamut of activities. All the people of Lawrence and vicinity are invited. I hope to see many of your listeners there tomorrow evening at Robinson Gymnasium at 7 p.m.

Announcer: I suppose in any community the size of Lawrence there are many types of people to be reached in a recreation program.
