

one thousand dollars was taken in at the dance, which was attended by Army and Navy officers as well as the enlisted men of all branches. It was a beautiful affair. Chancellor Deane W. Malott crowned the queen, Miss Shirley Otter, and presented beautiful bouquets to the queen's attendants, Miss Norma Henry and Miss Margaret Gurley. The queen was presented a five-year pass to all athletic games by the Athletic Association. The Chancellor, in his presentation remarks, declared, "This is one thing that I have always sworn I would never do - crown a queen." But he did it gracefully, although in placing the crown you could tell that he was not an experienced hand in placing wreaths of flowers on women's heads.

The officers of the K Club invited stars of the high school athletic teams in as their guests.

The leaders of this year's K Club have shown vision for the future because by crowning this queen they have enlisted the future women of the University in their activities. They are expecting to make this an annual affair and have a regular place on the program of big social events here at the University. The week of the Kansas Relays, when they are revived, will be the time for the dance. The K Club members will be hosts to the young athletes and the women of the University will assist in entertaining them. Never before have the K men activated themselves to the point of enlisting the socially elite of the University in promoting their athletic welfare. This is another symptom of a better balance of athletics, academics and social life for the University. So congratulations and best wishes to George Dick, Gordon Stucker, Sparky McSpadden, Charles Moffett and Bob Malott for having the initiative and foresight in post-war athletics, academics and social planning.

The spring sports at the University will close with a baseball game between the Kansas Jayhawkers and the Oklahoma Sooners on the varsity
