plains--in the face of danger and inclement weather--astride fleet-footed horses on mail-carrying missions. Dr. Allen's team has met and conquered the pick of the Southwest, a good Loyola team, and played havoc with the Big Six setup.

On the other hand, the Tigers showed their strength by discouraging the title plans of the rangy Nebraska team with a 46-33 triumph in last week's opener.

Never relinquishing the lead, the Tigers stymied the scoring thrusts of the touted Huskers early in the game and went on to completely demoralize the invaders with a dazzling display of defensive tactics. For ten minutes, starting seven minutes before the second quarter ended, the Cornhuskers were held scoreless by the air-tight play of the Missourians.

Meanwhile, the Tigers sharpened their basket eyes and feasted on uncanny scoring sprees throughout the game. Employing chicanery and carefully planned plays, they mercilessly faked the Nebraskans out of position time and time again.

Bill Harvey, as per usual against the Huskers, stole the show. The pink-cheeked lad led the individual scoring column with 14 points, six of them coming on successive free throws. Clay Cooper conspired with Harvey, in the basket-twins act, and rang up 11 points.

The Tigers connected with 17 shots out of 58 attempts for a 34 per cent average in the Husker triumph.
