

With the Tigers

University of Missouri athletic officials kept abreast with the growing interest in Tiger athletics by celebrating the 10th anniversary of Brewer Field House with the installation of 3,100 new bleachers for the Missouri-Nebraska basketball game.....This increased the seating capacity of the field house to 6,100 and only the ice and snow on the highways kept the crowd from reaching this height.....Approximately 5,000 were on hand on that occasion and stands will undoubtedly be filled for the Missouri-Kansas meeting here Thursday night.

Reigning "peoples' choice" on the Tiger squad is none other than diminutive Herbie Gregg.....The mighty atom of 5 feet 8 inches never fails to bring the house down in tumultuous applause when he trots on or off the floor.....It's the Kansas City mite's fireball "give-em-fits" style of play that accounts for his popularity as he "ball-hawks" all over the floor and has a deadly left-handed hook shot that brought him points in each of the seven non-conference tilts.

A few weeks ago Haskell Tison, 6 feet 7½ inch pivotman of the Bengals, startled local fans by warming up along the side of the court before going into the fray.....Says the stringbean Haskell: "I get so darned excited the blood freezes in my toes and I have to shake it loose."

Missouri track activities have been pretty much in a lull of late as the installing of the new bleachers hindered preparations for several days and now semester examinations are of more importance to the cindermen than are workouts.

A total of 91 games were played last week in the opening six-day span of intramural basketball at the Tiger school according to Director of Intramural Athletics, Anton J. Stankowski.....21 contests were played on Saturday, alone.....23 fraternities and 52 independent organizations contribute 75 teams to this year's schedule.
